THE OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFE TIME

RENO BEAUTIFUL

The Metropolis of Nevada. The City of Homes for Nevada People, is the Site of the State University, besides having the best public school system of any city of its size in the United States.

The chance is now given to a limited number to purchase a finely located residence lot in Reno upon a small payment down and the balance in small monthly installments. This property is located on the south side of the Truckee River in the finest residence section of the city. There is sure to be a rapid enhancement of value for this property, owing to the demand during the last two years for desirable property within a reasonable distance from the business center of the town. (These lots have been off the market for eight years). This property is on a street car line and at the same time is within a ten minutes walk of the post office. The lots are high and slightly and immediately adjacent to some of the nicest modern cottages and bungalows in Reno, with a magnificent view of the Truckee meadows.

E. M. Turner, representing the Bonham Realty & Trust Co. of Reno, is in Tonopah at the Mizpah hotel, where he can be seen or call him up by phone. He will be pleased to come to your home and go into the details of this splendid opportunity to acquire a beautiful home site in admittedly the Pride of Nevada and the finest city of its size in the inland west—RENO.

There is a project upon which active operation has begun that will require the expenditure of five hundred thousand dollars for the direct benefit of the citizens and property owners of Reno, besides the untold advantages the future will develop, making Reno the rival of every health resort in the world, which is the bringing of the wonderful hot curative waters of Steamboat Springs into Reno for heating and bathing purposes. This water at its source is 206 degrees Fahrenheit within six degrees of the boiling point. Three of the best hydraulic engineers in the country after examining this project say that this water can be transmitted ten miles to Reno by pipe line and still retain 182 degrees Fahrenheit. Just think what a convenience to have your home heated with a medical water of this character. Every home, every hotel, and rooming house will be a small sanatorium in itself besides making one gigantic sanatorium of the entire City of Reno.

The project has been completely financed by San Francisco capitalists.

The president of the company has already received a proposition from a private citizen of San Francisco to finance to the extent of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars a large hotel and sanatorium as soon as this water from Steamboat Springs is available, which will be about November of this year.

Any person who can spare a few dollars a month, to overlook this opportunity, now to acquire some of this most desirable property in Reno, will miss the rise in values sure to come in the near future.

See Mr. Turner at the Mizpah hotel and let him show you how you can do it at about the cost of a two month's cigar and tobacco bill or the price of an Easter bonnet.

(There has been an allotment of twenty lots for Tonopah).

JUDGE GOODWIN CASTIGATES NEW YORK TIMES IN HIS MOST STRENUOUS STYLE

Judge Goodwin in Goodwin's Weekly lays the New York Times across his knee, metaphorically speaking, and administers a sound spanking as follows:

The New York Times discusses the rise in the price of silver. Some of the reasons given are as follows:

"Paper money has been increased enormously in Europe. That circumstance alone would call for a greater coinage of silver. But it is probable that at the same time people have been hoarding silver. That would be only natural. Gold they are forbidden to hoard; silver they may. If they save at all, they would be at liberty to put silver aside and spend the paper money. Silver has an intrinsic value and always will have. Paper money, no matter how much confidence you have in it, is open to risk. Silver in hand would not be changed in value by the outcome of war, whereas some of the paper money now appearing in Europe may be greatly depreciated by the conditions of peace.

"So, what with a decreased output, an extraordinary demand for purposes of immediate coinage, and the inclination of people to value it more as money, silver was bound to go up. The effect upon the fortunes of the silver countries of the east, especially China, remains to be seen. In the gold prices of the west the silver money of the Chinese will buy today almost half again as much as it would buy two years ago. Also, the effect upon the fortunes of Mexico would be almost magical, if the people of that distracted country could only take full advantage of their opportunity."

When did the Times discover that silver was money? How long since it with the other metropolitan papers of the east, and such flabby essayists as Professor Sumner of Yale, Professor Laughlin of the University of Chicago and that dignified old tramp Edward Adkinson thundered to the people that silver was but a commodity and so prejudiced the average eastern man, who knew no more of the inherent money significance of gold and silver than Nicodemus did of the second birth, that he recoiled before accepting silver halves and quarters as change, and when he paid it out apologized, explaining that he had no paper fractional currency—that currency had for its favorite place of deposit the stockings of the scarlet woman.

And, this, too, when our government had put out more than 2,000 millions of bonds, our railroads quite as much more; when more than half of our republic was as yet a wilderness requiring untold millions to subdue it, and when could recognition of silver as money be withdrawn all would have been paid in gold.

And why does the Times think it probable that the people of Europe have been hoarding silver? The sales do not indicate it; the sales carried on by two or three nonentities in London at an expense of 1,000 millions to our miners, since Mr. Cleveland had Mr. Carlisle sell those last $250,000,000 in heavy interest-bearing bonds.

And why does the Times at last conclude that silver has an intrinsic value except for manufacturing purposes, or that this new demand for it comes from the people?

The people have about the same control of the finances of a country that they have of its wars. Was it any act of the people that two years ago started into eruption that volcano that has since made Europe simply one vast house of mourning?

As we construe this Times article, the masters of finance in New York are preparing to have silver at an early day remonetized, and have advised the Times to get ready to support the measure when they get ready to have the measure sprung upon the country.
